New-York Tribune., June 29, 1914,

New York Tribune

Vol. LXXIV... No. 24,017. NEW YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1914. PRICE ONE CENT

THE MAYOR'S OWN STORY OF HIS FIRST SIX MONTHS

Pledges to People Kept by Administration, He Tells The Tribune.

PUBLICITY KEYNOTE OF WORK FOR CITY

Pleased at Reforms Under Way in Police and Other Big Departments.

OFFICIAL FAMILY IN CO-OPERATION

Graft Vanishing Since Municipal Dealings Were Put on Business Basis.

The Mayor: administration has been in office six months. Following its custom, The Tribune asked Mayor Mitchel for a review of the work of his administration from January 1914 to date. In response to this request the Mayor prepared the following statement:

BY JOHN PURROY MITCHEL.

[illegible]

GET RHINELANDER THIEF

Police Learn of Robbery by Arrest in Rockland County.

[illegible]

BRAVES MIDAIR PERIL

High Setting Has No Terrors for Fire Captain.

[illegible]

FIND SCHANCK GIRL DEAD IN CREEK

Trenton's Six-Month Mystery Partly Solved When Body is Identified by Her Pin.

[illegible]

HAVE ARREST HABIT

Men and Women Charge Raid Other with Persecution.

[illegible]

This Morning's News.

[illegible]

U. S. GUNS FIRED ON DOMINICANS

Gunboat Nortons at Puerto Plata Intervenes Between Government and Rebel Forces.

[illegible]

HEIR TO AUSTRIAN THRONE ASSASSINATED; WIFE BY HIS SIDE ALSO SHOT TO DEATH; EARLIER ATTEMPT ON THEIR LIVES FAILED

HEIR TO THE AUSTRIAN THRONE AND HIS WIFE, VICTIMS OF ASSASSIN.

AUSTRIAN FRANCIS FERDINAND. THE DUCHESS OF HOHENBERG.

THE AGED EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

Francis Ferdinand, Nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph, Killed in Bosnian Capital an Hour After Warding Off Bomb Which Injures Score.

SLAYER A SERVIAN SOCIALIST

Volley from Revolver Hits Archduke and Duchess of Hohenberg as They Are Driving Together in Automobile in Town of Sarajevo—New Heir, Charles Joseph, 27 Years Old.

Sarajevo, Bosnia, June 28.—The Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the dual monarchy of Austria-Hungary, and his morganatic wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, were shot to death to-day on the main street of this, the Bosnian capital. Bullets from a repeating revolver in the hands of an eighteen-year-old youth killed the heir apparent and his wife, and thus completed the grim work a madman had unsuccessfully attempted only a few hours before by hurling a bomb at the royal automobile.

Another terrible chapter has thus been written into the tragic and romantic history of the House of Hapsburg, and to-night the aged Emperor lies prostrated by the news in his summer place at Ischl.

The flying fragments struck Francis Ferdinand full in the face. Other took its way into the Duchess's body. Another pierced the great artery in her throat. As the blood gushed from her neck she fell unconscious across her husband's knees.

An instant later he, too, sank to the floor of the car in a heap. Both were rushed with all speed to the palace. But no help was of avail. They died a few moments after they arrived.

ASSASSINATION CAREFULLY PLANNED.

The assassination had been carefully planned. It was while the heir to the Austrian throne and his wife had been to well wish on their way to the town hall that Nedelko Gabrinovics, a compositor-printer, flung a smoking bomb at the royal automobile. It was while they were returning from the hall, perhaps an hour later, that Gavrio Princip, a high school student, stood at the corner of the Rudolfstrasse and poured his fusillade into the helpless couple. Again, an unexploded bomb was found a few yards away from the scene of death. It had been flung in a corner by another madman after he had learned of the success of Princip's attack.

ARCHDUKE WAS INDIGNANT.

After the bomb exploded the Archduke and the Duchess proceeded to the City Hall. The automobiles were fast and the news had not yet filtered through the crowd in waiting. Indeed, there had hardly been time to telephone. So the burgomaster was astonished when he met his royal guests at the door to have his ceremonious address of greeting interrupted by the startling words of Francis Ferdinand:

"Here burgomaster, we come to pay you a visit and bombs are thrown at us. It is an insult!"

Then his princely dignity overcame his indignation, and he paused and said:

"Now you may speak."

After the ceremonies the Archduke and his wife announced after they would visit the wounded members of their suite in the hospitals on their way to the palace. They set out in their car, its lone protected by a cordon of police. They drove rapidly down the Franz Josefstrasse and were nearing the Rudolfstrasse when Princip, a pale faced boy—indeed, a mere stripling, but with all the zeal of a fanatic stirring in his countenance—popped out of the front rank of the crowd like a seed from an orange. No one seemed exactly to realize what he meant to do. It was so real and so unreal as a moving picture.

MAGAZINE REVOLVER USED.

Just as the automobile slowed up on the turn into the Franz Josefstrasse the boy raised his arm from his side. The sunlight flashed on the dull steel of the magazine revolver and soldiers in aged to grab the youth, but before they reached him he had accomplished his deed. It was with extreme difficulty that he was rescued from the infuriated crowd.

The first attack was filled with all the dramatic intensity and suddenness with which the successful and unsuccessful attempts on the lives of European monarchs have been attended. Sarajevo gave no fete to welcome Francis Ferdinand and his wife. It was a triumphal procession. Flags fluttered in the soft wind and garlands hung from the windows. A great throng of picturesquely clothed peasants pushed and shoved against the detachments of soldiers that held them good naturedly in check at the railway station where the couple were expected.

HEIR APPARENT UNGUARDED.

There was no special military preparation, however, as the heir to the throne had always been regarded as so popular that no particular precautions were necessary. Indeed, the general feeling that he would without doubt in the near future succeed to the throne through the death of his uncle had clothed him with a sort of affection that caused to protect him.

With his wife and staff he came from the train to the [illegible], and as the crowd cheered the royal procession started for the City Hall along the flag decorated road. A short three hun-

BIG LINER STUCK BETWEEN ROCKS

Wireless Reports All Safe on California and Gunboats at Hand.

PASSENGERS TAKE ACCIDENT CALMLY

Sea Quiet, but Currents Tend to Turn Vessel Is Fast Off Irish Coast.

[illegible]

ARCHDUKE PARRIED BOMB WITH ARM

Warded Off the Deadly Missile from Himself and Wife.

MET HIS END LATER BY BULLET WOUND

Crowd in Both Cases Tried to Make Assassins Pay Supremely for Crime.

[illegible]

WANAMAKER FLYER TESTED BY STORM

Over-Ocean Boat, Blown Into the Air by a Sixty Mile Gale, Withstands Severe Buffets of Wind, Rain and Hail.

[illegible]

HUERTA CLAIMS VICTORY.

Mexico City Tells That Chihuahua Has Been Retaken.

[illegible]