HONS 381.01: Value & Tradition in Asian Religions
Prof. Zeff Bjerken For HONS Students Section 001 (MW 02:00 – 03:15) MYBK 320
This course will explore the visions, values, and practices that motivate the religious traditions of Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Daoism and Christianity, which have formed the civilizations of South and East Asia. The course is designed around major conceptual themes, including discerning between illusion and reality; meditation and the diversity of religious experiences; pilgrimage and spiritual journeys; death, the afterlife, and ancestor worship; religion, gender and sexuality; monasticism, asceticism and the hermit’s life; the transformation of foreign traditions to fit native worldviews; and the effects of modernization on religions today. We will also watch a number of contemporary films that explore the conflicts between tradition and modernity in contemporary cultures in Asia. The course will follow an easterly route, beginning in India and moving to China and Japan, at the same time as we move from ancient times down to the present day. We begin with the ancient Indian civilization that appeared some 3,000 years ago and end with religious debates over the topics of abortion and organ transplant in Japan today. The course will call into question our common distinctions between self and society, church and state, and religion and spirituality.

HONS 381.05: Values and Science of Sustainable Agriculture
Prof. Todd LeVasseur and Seth Pritchard For HONS Students Section 005 (T 01:40 – 04:20) TBA
This course is an interdisciplinary investigation into the technology of domesticated plant and animal species that began with the Agricultural Revolution 10,000 years ago. Students will explore cultural values and narratives that inform farming practices of the Agricultural Revolution, through the current Green Revolution of industrial farming, while learning how this type of food procurement is contributing to many environmental and social justice issues, ranging from farm worker labor rights to issues of gender equality to issues of environmental justice. Students will then explore cultural values and narratives devoted to supporting a variety of alternative sustainable agricultural practices. These include permaculture, organic, biodynamic, and traditional ecological knowledge, with this exploration situated within insights from contemporary ecological agrarianism. In addition to exploring cultural and value-based aspects of food production systems, we will also delve into the biology of food production systems with a particular interest in elucidating the relationships between agricultural inputs (fertilizers, biocides), mechanization, soil carbon management, biodiversity, water quality and global biogeochemistry. This element of the course will help students understand the environmental metrics behind whether certain farming practices are sustainable or not.

FYSE 134.01: Origins: The History of Religion
Prof. Louise Doire For Freshmen Section 001 (MWF 09:00 – 09:50) ECTR 219
This course is designed to be an introduction to the study of religion and the origins of the world's major religious traditions including Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Judaism, Christianity and Islam. The course will focus on the historical development of these traditions and may also include a study of sacred text, ritual and values.

RELS 101.001: Approaches to Religion: Life After Death
Prof. Lee Irwin No Prerequisites Section 001 (TR 09:25 - 10:40) ECTR 118
This course is a comparative introduction to religion organized around the theme of death, soul concepts, and a variety of beliefs about life after death. In terms of culture areas, the theme will be internationalized by looking at a variety of model cultures: ancient Mediterranean religions; Judaism and Christianity in Europe and America; Islam in the Middle East; Hinduism and Buddhism in India and Daoist and Confucian beliefs in China. The organization of the course starts with the culture areas and examine attitudes and religious beliefs in life after death among the religions of the world – this portion of the course will emphasize theories in comparative religions. In Christianity we will look at an esoteric Christian writer on sacred cosmology and in Buddhism we will discuss a book by a famous Tibetan Buddhist leader on after death processes. Toward the end of the course, we examine current research on life after death, in relation to a variety of studies linked to scientific investigation of post-mortem life independent of theories in religion or philosophy.

RELS 101.002/03: Approaches to Religion: Messiahs & Messianic Movements
Prof John Huddleston No Prerequisites Section 002 (MW 2:00 - 03:15) ECTR 103
Section 003 (MW 3:25 – 4:40) ECTR 103
This course introduces the student to the academic study of religion through an examination of a particular theme in a handful of selected traditions. Following some discussion of the topic of religion and how to define it, we will focus on messiahs and messiah-like figures (and related movements) in three religious traditions: Judaism (setting the biblical foundation), Islam, and Buddhism (especially the Future Buddha Maitreya). Our examination of these will draw principally upon primary texts, along with some supplementary readings. The approach will be historical and more comparative as the course progresses, with some attention to various theories regarding failed messianic movements. The messiah theme provides an entry into many of the central ideas or concepts of each tradition; in this manner, the student should acquire some understanding of the basic tenets of each tradition and also an appreciation for its respective adherents.
REL 101.004: Approaches to Religion: Religion and Terrorism
Prof. Eugene Gallagher  No Prerequisites  Section 004 (TR 12:15 - 1:30)  ECTR 219
This course provides an introduction to the academic study of religion by focusing on the multiple relations between religion and terrorism. We will first establish provisional definitions, or at least tentative characterizations, of both “religion” and “terrorism.” Though each of those phenomena might seem to be easily identified, we will find that, in fact, things are much more complicated. We will continue to refine those definitions throughout the semester. Equipped with those preliminary characterizations, we will describe, analyze, and interpret a selection of case studies taken from different times, cultures, and social and political contexts, which along the way will introduce students to Japanese Buddhism, evangelical Christianity, and Wahhabi Islam.

REL 105.01/02: Introduction to World Religions
Prof June McDaniel  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (MWF 10:00 - 10:50)  ECTR 103
Section 002 (MWF 11:00 - 11:50)  ECTR 103
This course will introduce the beliefs and practices of a wide variety of world religions, including indigenous religions from Africa and the Pacific, and shamanism, Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Shinto, Judaism, Zoroastrianism, Christianity, and Islam. We will also include data on atheism and several New Religious Movements. There are no prerequisites, and the class will require three tests, two papers, and attendance.

REL 105.03: Introduction to World Religions
Prof Courtney Tepera  No Prerequisites  Section 003 (TR 03:05 - 04:20)  ECTR 103
This course provides a basic introduction to prominent religious traditions and how they have impacted the world around them. We will focus primarily on Buddhism, Christianity, Confucianism, Daoism, Hinduism, Islam, Judaism, and Yoruba. These religions will be studied as cultural phenomena and repositories of knowledge to better understand the interaction of religion and culture in the modern world.

REL 105.04/05: Introduction to World Religions
Prof Margaret Cormack  No Prerequisites  Section 004 (MWF 12:00 - 12:50)  ECTR 103
Section 005 (MWF 01:00 – 01:50)  ECTR 103
The goal of this course is to introduce you to the beliefs, practices, and history of the major religions of the world. We will approach each tradition impartially, studying its beliefs concerning divinity/ies, the universe, the place and obligations of human beings within that universe, the afterlife, and how these beliefs were represented in cultural artifacts – poetry, statues, temples, and sacred texts. We will consider how the beliefs developed and how they relate to the societies that adhere to them. You will learn how people from different cultures look at the world, and how to think critically and sympathetically about a variety of world-views.

REL 115.01: Religion and Society: Black Nationalism and Religion
Prof Matthew Cressler  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (MWF 11:00 - 11:50)  ECTR 219
This course will introduce students to religious ideas and practices from across the African diaspora that gave rise to the African American political tradition known as “black nationalism.” In popular American memory black nationalists—whose philosophies and tactics range from cultural pride to armed self-defense, from economic self-determination to political independence—are usually associated with “Black Power” and imagined as the secular alternative to religious civil rights activists. This course challenges this image and situates Black Power in the long black nationalist tradition, a tradition with deep religious roots. Students will be introduced to the concept of “nationalism” and its relationship with its modern conceptual counterpart “religion.”

REL 202.01: New Testament: History and Interpretation
Prof. John Huddleston  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (TR 05:30 - 06:45)  ECTR 219
This course examines that group of documents known collectively in Christian tradition as the New Testament. In addition to generous readings from the biblical text, we will examine selected extra-biblical documents (Jewish and Greco-Roman) designed to situate the early Christian canonical writings in their pristine historical, religious, and social contexts. Topics discussed include textual criticism, canon formation, sources within the gospel tradition, the quest for the historical Jesus, messianic movements, and the apocalyptic genre. Particular attention will be devoted to: (1) the position of early Christianity as one among a number of Jewish sects in the diverse religious world of first-century Palestine, and (2) the contentious debate over the requirements for gentile (non-Jewish) entry into the fledgling Jewish-Christian community as reflected in the writings of Paul.
RELS 210.01: Theories in the Study of Religions
Prof. Matthew Cressler  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (MW 02:00 - 03:15)  ECTR 219
As a theoretical introduction to the academic study of religion, this course surveys a number of important debates in the history of religious studies, such as the insider/outsider problem, definitions of religion, theories on the origins of religion, the comparison of religions, and religion’s psychological, sociological and political functions.

RELS 215.01: Religion and Globalization
Prof. Eugene Gallagher  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (TR 03:05 - 04:20)  ECTR 219
This course focuses on various dimensions of the contemporary globalization of religion. In its first section it will provide a basic orientation to the descriptive and analytical concepts of "religion" and "globalization" as they are used in current academic and popular discourse. In its second section, it will concentrate on three case studies that will treat aspects of Christianity, Islam, and Hinduism in the contemporary world.

RELS 240.01/02: Buddhist Traditions
Prof. Zeff Bjerken  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (TR 08:00 - 09:15)  ECTR 219
Section 002 (TR 10:50 - 12:05)  ECTR 219
It’s time to wake up! This course will survey the traditions that derive from the teachings of the Buddha, the “Awakened One.” A number of enduring themes will be explored that pertain to Buddhist philosophy (e.g. Nirvana and the status of the self), Buddhist practices (e.g. meditation and monastic life), and politics and society (e.g. Buddhist kingship, women and Buddhism). We will trace the transformation of Buddhism from India into Thailand, China, Tibet, and into America today. Buddhism is a tradition of great complexity whose dimensions evolved to answer the needs of people of different historical periods and cultures. We’ll rely extensively on primary Buddhist texts, but we’ll also read two books (a spiritual travelogue and a novel) about western seekers of enlightenment. We also will watch documentary films that illustrate how Buddhist ideas and practices are woven into many aspects of daily life in Asia.

RELS 250.01: Religions of America
Prof. Elijah Siegler  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (TR 10:50 - 12:05)  ECTR 103
This course will cover American religious history from the sixteenth century until today, including the religions of Native Americans, Puritans, Southern slaves and slave-owners, evangelicals, Jews, Catholics, Mormons, and many others. Students will learn how religion in America intersects with politics, culture and race. Students will have the opportunity to learn about the religions of the Charleston area and to explore their families’ religious history.

RELS 298.01: Special Topics: Altered States of Consciousness
Prof. Lee Irwin  No Prerequisites  Section 001 (TR 12:15 - 01:30)  ECTR 103
Cross listed with PSYC 315 with Jennifer Wright
This course will be an interdisciplinary survey of research on altered states of consciousness. The course is team taught and will review material from the perspectives of religious studies and psychology. Specifically, we’ll examine how different disciplines understand altered states of consciousness—what they are, their diversity and origins, how they are achieved, and their potential value to human life. We will explore the role of altered states of consciousness in a variety of religious and mystical practices, in transpersonal theory, and in daily life practices. We will investigate such topics as mind and selfhood, life and death, paranormal abilities, and the boundaries of exceptional human experience. We will also analyze the potential power of consciousness to generate an increased awareness and desire to heal ourselves and the world, as well as how activities of consciousness, such as meditation, are important transformative forms of social action.

RELS 298.02: Special Topics: Miracles, Monks and Magic: Christian Life in the Middle Ages
Prof. Margaret Cormack  No Prerequisites  Section 002 (MWF 10:00 - 10:50)  ECTR 219
For medieval Christians in western Europe, the world was inhabited not just by their neighbors and farm and wild animals, but also by a variety of spiritual beings – angels, saints, and demons - who could influence their lives for good or ill. In this course, we will examine the religious beliefs and practices of Western European Christians in the period ca. 1100-1450. We will consider what their churches looked like, inside and out; what a church service sounded like; how people obtained religious knowledge, and how they practiced it; the life-stages they went through; what changed if they became a priest or joined a monastery. We will consider pilgrimage, heresy, trial by ordeal, the position of women and how Christians interacted with Jews, Muslims, magicians, healers, heretics and spiritual beings. No prior knowledge required – only enthusiasm for the above topics!

RELS 301.01: Mysticism and Religious Experience
Prof. June McDaniel  3 Credit Hours  Section 001 (MWF 01:00 - 01:50)  ECTR 219
The Mysticism and Religious Experience class will explore the esoteric core of the world’s religions, their mystical doctrines, rituals, and states of love and unity with the Divine. There will be films and guest speakers, and we shall go on a brief contemplative retreat. The topics will include the ancient Greek and Egyptian mysteries, Kabbalah, Catholic and Orthodox mystics, Sufism, several forms of Hindu and Buddhist mystical techniques, Qi and China, and indigenous forms of mystical practice, including trance and possession. There will be two tests, two papers, and one group presentation.

RELS 315.01: New Religious Movements
Prof. Elijah Siegler  3 Credit Hours  Section 001 (TR 01:40 - 02:55)  MYBK 119
New Religious Movements (NRMs) are often better known as “cults.” What are they? Where do they come from? This course takes an interdisciplinary approach to the study of NRMs. The first half of the class looks at NRMs in the West as historical and cultural phenomena. The second half explores NRMs around the world, emphasizing issues of political and social change and globalization. Specific topics to be covered include the Anti-Cult Movement, the “brainwashing” hypothesis, the occult and the New Age, and NRMs that derive from Islam (like al-Qaeda) and Chinese religion (like Falun Gong).

RELS 451.01: Capstone Colloquium
Prof. Elijah Siegler  For Seniors-210, 450 & 1 other RELS  Section 001 (M 02:00 - 02:50)  MYBK 119
This required course is designed to provide a capstone experience for majors in Religious Studies, and it will feature visits from RELS faculty and recent alumni as guest speakers. The Colloquium is not another course on the subject of religion, but a “meta-course” that will provide RELS students with an opportunity to reflect on the cumulative achievement of their studies and consider how they might apply their knowledge and skills in their future professional lives. The Colloquium is designed to give students, in the company of other majors, the opportunity to: 1) review their own study of religion at CofC in order to identify their distinctive interests in particular subjects; 2) write an intellectual autobiography; 3) evaluate how their training served as a bridge between other academic disciplines; and 4) grasp how the study of religion might prepare them to put their learning to work in the world.
